COURSE DESCRIPTION

The seminar addresses a burning issue in international relations: the linkage between displacement, refugee flows, international migration and conflict. According to a June 2015 report by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), worldwide displacement has now hit an all time high, with close to 60 million people forced to leave home and seek safety elsewhere. To come to grips with the complex relation between conflict and displacement, we start off with some fact-finding and definitions: Who is a refugee, an asylum seeker and an economic migrant? Which overlaps exist between the different concepts and how can they be separated? What are recent global and regional trends and how do they compare to past records? In a second step, we will examine those factors that lead people to leave home and flee across boarders or even seas. What are the major causes of displacements and refugees flows, and how do they compare to other patterns of international migration? When and how do people seek refuge in another country? What are the motives behind migration? What are the inter-linkages between conflict and migration? In addition, we will have a closer look at the effects of humanitarian aid and assess possible risks associated with the establishment of...
of refugees camp especially, notably the recruitment of combatants. In the light of the current mass refugee movements, we also study the consequences that refugee and migration flows have in the recipient countries. We look at direct neighbors of conflict-ridden regions, notably the EU and other developed countries. What are their policies towards refugees and migrants? Which social and economic issues are at stake? What instruments have been or are being put in place at the international level to address displacement, and how effective are they? In a final part of the seminar, we will apply the knowledge and insights gained and deep-dive into several case studies.

Course Requirements & Assessment:

- Regular attendance & active class participation
- Class presentation & leading the class discussion. Every student is obliged to discuss his or her presentation one week in advance during my office ours with me.
- Please hand in an electronic copy AND a printed version. The printed copy must be submitted to my secretary (not my colleagues) on the due date. Make sure to include a anti-plagiarism statement.

Participation:
Students are expected to come prepared to the sessions, having read the reading for class discussion. Particular emphasis will be placed on the critical discussion of the readings, which should generally be dominated by you, not me, and the discussion of and feedback on your work.

Presentation and leading class discussion
You need to sign up for one presentation and lead the seminar discussion. Note that in the presentation, you need to go beyond the reading. The presentation should provide a substantial insight into the topic and discuss the methods and data used in the research articles. Group works are very welcome!

Important: Every student must see me one week before the presentation. Bring your Power Point presentation to this meeting. Make sure you sign up for my office hours in time.

Research paper
Each student needs to hand in a research paper before or on the 19th of June 2017 (12 am – sharp, every day late means minus one full grade). The paper can either be based on your presentation or related to any other topic we have covered in class. It should not exceed 15 pages, including all. Length is not a criteria for quality.
DETAILED COURSE PLAN

Week 1:  Introduction to the seminar
(17.02)

Guiding Questions: What will we be talking about in this seminar? Who will do which presentation?

No reading
