

Job Announcement for Student Research Assistant

Professor Dr. Thomas König, Chair of Political Science, European Politics is currently seeking a

Student Research Assistant (Master Program) (for 20-30 hours a month)

starting at the earliest possible date.

The Chair's research is mainly rooted in the area of comparative political science and legislative research with a focus on Europe. Methodologically, most activities center around empirical testing of institutional theories on political bargaining and decision-making.

As a student research assistant, you support ongoing research projects of Professor König and his team. In particular, student research assistants help us to collect and manage datasets with Stata and R. We expect a strong interest in quantitative data analysis and political science research generally. A background in Comparative Politics, European Union Politics or International Relations is preferred. A strong command of English is mandatory as well as some prior experience with data management/analysis.

We offer active participation in research projects and flexible working hours. The working language can be English or German, however, a good command of English is required. Students with no prior experience in R will have the opportunity to learn this programming language in their work time.

Please submit a short motivation letter (1 page), a CV and a transcript of records etc. as one pdf-file by August 31, 2019 via e-mail to verena.kunz@gess.uni-mannheim.de. You can also email Verena Kunz if you have any questions or wish to require additional information concerning this vacancy.
